The Grounds and Buildings Are In Good Shape for the

BEDFORD COUNTY FAIR

Prospects Are Good for the Biggest Exhibition in the History of Agricultural Society:

The grounds and buildings are now in the best of condition for the fair, and the Association assures us that the finest products of farm and garden, also stock and poultry will be on exhibition during the coming week. The best program of amusements, races and entertainments of all kinds has been arranged for and it will surpass any previous year.

You can't afford to miss any one of the four big days, and one will be as good as another. Make arrangements for your family to hold their family reunion next week.

From information received by the Secretary from different parts of the county Wednesday, "Children's Day," will be a great day for the boys and girls. Many teachers have sent for tickets which are issued free to the children. The Bedford merchants have decided to close their stores Friday afternoon so that they and their clerks may take in the fair.

An additional attraction has been arranged for by the Association. Tompkin's Wild West Show will give exhibitions on the grounds daily, and one of the best educated horse shows on the road will also exhibit on the grounds all of the four big days.

Miss Mabel Hackney of this company will give a free performance before the grand stand daily with her wonderful trained horse, "Vardius."

Attention of exhibitors of fruit is called to the fact that the Fair Association has this year secured baskets which hold one-half peck, to be used for displaying fruits of all kinds. These baskets will be furnished to exhibitors by the superintendent of this department.

The entire program has already been published in detail, and all that is now left for the people to do is to come to the fair and enjoy themselves. Take this much of your time away from your work and business; it will do you good in many ways.

The admission fee will be the same as last year; 35 cents for adults and 25 cents for children under 15 years of age.

Dively Family Reunion

A reunion of the descendants of the late Jacob G. Dively was held at the home of Albert Dively at Yount's Station on September 10, which was very largely attended and was enjoyed by all present.

After a sumptuous dinner, Adam G. Dively, Esq., addressed those present, giving an interesting and instructive history of the Dively family in which he referred with particular pride to the fact that there is no record of any crime having been committed by any member of the family as far back as the family history can be traced.

All the members of the family living in this community were present and among those from a distance were Dr. J. F. Dively and family, of Palm Beach, Fla., and Dr. R. M. Dively, wife and two children, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

MAIN LINE ASSOCIATION

Of Royal Arcanum Held Interesting Meeting in Bedford.

Tuesday evening Bedford Springs Council, No. 1935, Royal Arcanum, held its regular meeting at which time one new member was initiated into the mysteries of the order. After all business had been transacted the Main Line Association took charge of the meeting. This association is composed of councils from Blair, Huntingdon, Mifflin and Bedford Counties.

The president of the association, J. W. Adams of Juniata Council, Huntingdon, presided. The first speaker was H. H. McIlroy, editor and instructor of printing at the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory, who was followed by C. C. Brewster, District Attorney of Huntingdon. The principal address of the evening was made by Rev. Charles E. Snyder, Grand Chaplain, of Pittsburgh. Remarks were made by a number of the delegates and by several members of Bedford Springs Council.

The following delegates, besides those above mentioned, were present: Dr. C. H. Brislin, Harry H. Laub and J. Frank Moiss, of Lewistown; Dr. H. H. Hartzell and George M. Bradley, of Altoona; Fred C. Buck, C. M. Buck and L. E. Ginter, of Tyrone. Twelve members of Tussey Council, Everett, were present.

The members of Bedford Springs Council were highly gratified with the success of the meeting, and extended an invitation to the Main Line Association to return to Bedford at some future time to hold another meeting.

P. R. R. Y. M. C. A.

Of Altoona Visited Bedford Saturday and Sunday.

The evangelistic meetings held in Bedford last Saturday evening and Sunday by the Altoona P. R. R. Y. M. C. A. representatives were most fruitful in their results.

Despite the heavy rains of Saturday which threatened an indoor service, great crowds assembled on the Public Square at 8 p. m., giving respectful attention during a service of song and exhortation of over an hour's length.

The music by a large chorus choir, under the direction of Mr. Yingling of Altoona, assisted by Miss L. D. Shuck, organist, was most inspiring.

Following prayer by Rev. W. V. Ganoe, an address was made by Dr. Feltwell, which was full of spiritual fervor and earnest appeal.

At 8:30 a. m. Sunday a prayer service was held in the Methodist Church which was a time of remarkable manifestation of spiritual power.

Various pulpits were filled during the morning services by Y. M. C. A. workers, and at 2 o'clock probably the greatest open-air service of a religious character ever held in Bedford was engaged in by a multitude of both Christians and non-church goers.

After a song service and prayer by Rev. J. Albert Eyler, Dr. Ellis of Juniata College delivered the sermon, his text being: "What think ye of Christ?"

The great spiritual uplift resulting from this message of power was apparent to all and when president E. M. Dougherty gave an invitation for Christian testimony great numbers arose to give a reason for the hope within them.

Selections by the Y. M. C. A. quartet, together with a children's choir and senior chorus, concluded the day's service.

As a parting word of appreciation, Rev. Wiegand suggested a vote of thanks to the organization and received a unanimous response, with an invitation to them to come again.

Friends of the cause are indebted to Mr. Stuard of Altoona for suggesting and arranging in detail the meetings held.

Removed an Eye

On Sunday Dr. Speckman of Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, and Dr. H. B. Strock of Bedford removed Mrs. Job Shoemaker's left eye. Mrs. Shoemaker has been totally blind for a number of years. The bursting of her eye made its removal necessary and the operation was very successfully performed.

He was standing on the shafts adjusting the harness, when the horse began kicking, and he was thrown under the vehicle, the wheels passing over him, rendering him unconscious for a short time.

OLD FORBES ROAD

Prof. Lacock and Mr. Moore on Final Trip Over the

HISTORIC THOROUGHFARE

Well-Defined Traces Found and Course Established—From Bedford Westward.

Tuesday of this week Prof. Lacock, of the faculty of Harvard University, who twice before in company with surveyors, historians, photographers, etc., has followed the course of the old Forbes road from Bedford westward, arrived in Bedford, and in company with William A. Moore, Assistant Chief Draftsman of Pennsylvania, started on the final trip over the trail. They had with them a draft of the now historic thoroughfare, made by Mr. Moore from original surveys, which enables them to make comparisons with the conclusions of the past two summers and check and verify their findings.

From notes which the genial Harvard man kindly allowed us to scan we gather the following:

"With the aid of our maps the site of old Fort Bedford was located very satisfactorily. All traces of the road are forever obliterated through the town of Bedford. Judging from the course of the road laid down on the topographic sheets, the Road of 1790, the Forbes Marching Journal, Manor of Bedford, Warranted Surveys, it is fair to assume that the present pike approximates very closely the course of the old Forbes Road as far west as the Raystown Branch of the Juniata, about two miles westward of Bedford; however, there is clear evidence of an old road keeping northward of the present pike and then re-crossing to the south of the pike, near Daniel Manges' about one mile east of Wolfburg.

"The evidence of an old road from this point to the Raystown Branch of the Juniata River at Wolfburg is very distinct. The road from Bedford to this point skirts the northern foot of Willis Mountain. In order to gain a favorable ascent of a very steep bluff at this point (i. e. at the western end of Wolfburg) it seems that the road crosses the Juniata about 100 yards above or west of the present bridge, thence following this bluff for some 200 yards southward of Wolfburg before the ascent was made. The road after being cut to the top of this precipice, on land owned by James Carney, continues in a north westerly direction, coming into the turnpike just west of the little village of Wolfburg. From here to the C. W. S. Stuckey farm the road seems to coincide with the present turnpike. About one-fourth mile westward from Mr. Stuckey's residence is the point at which the Bedford Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad intersects the pike. This is the most likely point at which the Burd Road (built in 1755) and the Forbes Road come together.

"One mile further westward in the forks of the road lives Henderson Souser. At a point one-half mile westward from the railroad crossing, after following the turnpike to the boundary line between Bedford and Napier Townships, the road diverges to the southward crossing the farms of James H. Cook and Dr. S. H. Gump. Here on Dr. Gump's farm less than 500 yards to the southward was the celebrated Bonnet Log Tavern, and the original point at which the Burd and Forbes Roads diverge. The pointing out of an old well, a line of mountain stones at one place and uncovered mountain stones at another by Dr. S. H. Gump aided materially in the location of the intersection of the Forbes and Burd Roads. In this log house Dr. Gump's mother was born in 1819.

"From this old tavern side, the foundation of which is still visible, the road parallels the pike crossing the present township road (the Glade Pike) to Mann's Choice, about 400 yards south of its intersection with the present pike, thence continuing in a north westerly course paralleling the pike, passing through the Henderson Souser farm, the W. S. Suter farm, the W. B. Souser farm, and the Scott Stuckey farm to the eastern slope of Tull's Hill.

"At the foot of Tull's Hill the road again recrosses the turnpike continuing through the lands of Mr. Stuckey to George Ellenberger's and Jacob Smith's land, crossing a township road at the summit of Tull's Hill about 100 yards north of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia Pike. From this

A DONKEY ENGINE

Illustrating Some Points In a Girl's Choice of a Husband

By EMILY SEWELL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Why is it that the most important step in life, marriage, is often decided at haphazard? Perhaps it is because every one considers marriage a lottery. At any rate, an impatient word, a flower given in the nick of time, a misunderstood sentence, a smile, will often determine whether Molly is to marry Tom, with a happy life before her, or John with misery and final divorce.

Margaret Lee, though still young and comparatively inexperienced, was born to a natural insight into such matters. Where most young ladies would give their hearts in return for a compliment, she looked for something more enduring. She was wiser even than this. She knew that she could not forecast what her fate would be with any man. Tom might be one of nature's noblemen, but he might also be a poor provider. John might be narrow minded and selfish, but might bestow upon her wealth and honors. Margaret realized that she must take her chances.

Miss Lee's choice gradually narrowed down to one of two men. Her Tom and John were Pope Armstrong and Le Baron Brown. Armstrong represented what has been said of Tom; he was especially interested in his own career. Brown was, in some respects, typified by John. He was a noble fellow, but was regarded by his friends as full of fine impracticable impulses and a born gambler; not a gambler in the narrow, but the broad sense. Both wanted Margaret, and Margaret wanted one or the other of them. Her judgment said Armstrong, her inclination favored Brown.

One evening Armstrong went to see her and used very excellent arguments why she should marry him. He was getting a good salary, with prospects of a better. He was putting aside 30 per cent of his income and already had a nest egg laid up that was paying him a good interest. "I am going for houses and lands," he said, "and you know that this is no vain boast, for I have already done the hardest part of the work. I have got the first thousand dollars."

Margaret's head, if not her heart, was won. She remembered that Brown had recently loaned a friend $500, that he never expected to see again. Would she not better settle the matter between them now, and in favor of Armstrong? She would if she could, but she could not.

"Come tomorrow evening," she said, "and I'll try to give you an answer." "I'll tell what I'll do, Margaret," said the wooer. "I'll come tomorrow evening and we'll flip a coin to decide whether you marry me or not."

"Very well," said Margaret, in a tired way. The next day she met Brown on the street, and he walked home with her. They had so much to say to each other that they couldn't say it all before reaching her house, so Brown went in.

"Margaret," he said, "I have no doubt that you can do better by marrying some one else than me. But my argument is this: You must take the risk any way. Why not take it with a man you love? Besides, some men are capable of being made by a wife. You would undoubtedly have a hard time with me, but you're a level headed girl, and that's the kind I need. I'm a donkey engine, and, you know, an engine can't run itself; it must have an engineer."

Margaret was so influenced by this argument, especially since her heart was enlisted, that she promised the young man that if something—she wouldn't tell what—turned out the next evening a certain way she would marry him. Brown showed that when interested in a subject he had a lot of hang on in him, for he never gave up till he drew the information out of her that she was to decide his rival's fate by the spinning of a coin. Then he refused to let go until she had agreed to give him an equal chance. She consented that he should be present the next evening and the coin should decide between him and Armstrong. The coin would be spun as a bit of play, but it was understood that whichever man won won in earnest.

The advantage was all with Brown because he knew of the game to be played and had a day in which to prepare for it. One may say that in such an affair there is no preparation to be made or if any is possible it is dishonorable.

But while Armstrong had the steadiness of a planet revolving in its fixed orbit, Brown was a man for occasion. While he had noble impulses, he did not allow them to run away with him in the matter of the girl he loved. All's fair in war and love is a principle of nature. During the evening he spun coins on a smooth table top till midnight. Before he had finished he had discovered how to make them fall on which ever side he chose.

The next morning he telephoned to his employer that he would not be ready for business that day and had no excuse to offer for his absence. "Very sorry to lose you, Mr. Brown," was the reply, "but you needn't come tomorrow; your place will be filled."

It may seem singular that a man struggling to get a wife should give up the income on which to support her, but Brown argued that he couldn't get the wife and keep the position. He possessed the faculty of deciding between the greater and the lesser. He needed all of the day to continue his preparations for the game he was to play in the evening. If he lost there was no recovery. If he won he had a lifetime in which to secure another position.

When the evening for the trial came Brown had used up in preparation every moment since he had parted with Margaret the day before, except eight hours for sleep. It was not that he dreaded failure, but detection. If he were caught introducing loaded coins for the spinning he could not tell just what would be the result. He might lose the girl. He certainly would incur the contumely of his rival, and his action might prove ruinous to him. But nothing troubled him except the possible loss of the prize.

Brown called late enough to give his rival an opportunity to get in before him, then entered as though he had merely dropped in casually. Armstrong looked annoyed, and Margaret appeared to be very regretful of having drifted into the position she occupied. The three with difficulty kept up an embarrassing conversation for half an hour, when Armstrong, giving Margaret a knowing look, proposed to decide a question he had raised by spinning a coin. He had invited her to go to the theater with him, and she seemed to be in doubt what day to set for the purpose. His proposition he intended for an introduction to the trial that was to decide his fate with Margaret. The night for attending the theater having been settled, Brown proposed some other way of amusing the trio by coin spinning. Margaret wore an American Beauty rose in her hair, and at last Brown proposed to Armstrong to spin a coin for it. Margaret consented and Armstrong won the rose. Then Brown spoke.

"Mr. Armstrong, there is a prize we both desire, though I can't say that either will possess it. I shall not name it. You are perfectly aware of what it is. I will spin a silver half dollar for it, best three out of five."

Armstrong looked at Brown and understood. Then he looked at Margaret and saw that, while she did not approve, she did not forbid. They had been playing with a coin that Armstrong had taken from his pocket. Brown picked it up and said: "We will begin with this half dollar; spin it twice; I will then furnish one which we will spin twice; then we will spin one belonging to Miss Lee."

Placing the coin under his forefinger, he asked Armstrong, "Heads or tails?" Armstrong chose heads, the coin was spun and Armstrong won. The next spinning was by Armstrong, who lost. At the third test Brown declined to substitute his own coin, but won. Brown lost the fourth test, making a tie. He then asked Margaret for a coin, which she gave him.

All three knew what was at stake. Armstrong was composed outwardly, but excited inwardly. Brown showed no emotion whatever. Margaret was drawing long breaths, and her color was leaving her. Brown called upon her to spin the coin. She consented, and Brown won, gaining the best three in five and the prize.

Armstrong's eyes flashed. Taking up the coin he examined it critically. "Would you accuse me of cheating?" asked Brown.

"All's fair in war and in love," was the dogged reply.

"So I thought till I sat down for this test, when my conscience told me that an unfair advantage is dishonorable in any event. I am an expert at coin spinning, if I may use my own coin, as I will show you. In this contest you furnished the coin which tied us, while Miss Lee furnished the one that decided between us. Now I will show you that with my own coin I can win every time."

Taking a silver half dollar from his pocket, he called on Armstrong to choose heads or tails and spun it, and Armstrong lost. Brown repeated this seven times, winning every time. Armstrong took up the coin and examined it carefully, but could see nothing unusual about it.

"Is it loaded?" he asked. "No," replied Brown. Taking a small magnifying glass from his pocket, he asked Armstrong to examine the coin with it. Armstrong saw that the edge of the milling on the head side had been filed smooth. This would naturally cause the coin to sink "head" side down.

"Let us try it again," said Brown, "and see if tails will always be up. He did so, and, contrary to expectation, head was always up. Brown then showed him that the coin had been filed on the tail side. He had changed coins without their knowing it.

Armstrong arose and, concealing his chagrin as well as he could, bowed politely to both of those he left behind and withdrew.

The moment Margaret was left alone with the man who had won she threw herself into his arms.

"You could not do it, could you?" she exclaimed impulsively.

"No," he said. "I couldn't."

"But you intended to do it?"

"Yes, I did. It seemed that I couldn't take any risk in this one matter. I spent a whole day in making preparations to win and gave up my position to gain time for the purpose. So you see you are to be possessed by a man who is!"

"Never mind. I am possessed by the man I want."

Brown became a successful and distinguished man, with whom his wife was happy and of whom she was proud. But he always said she was his engineer.

CATARH sufferers

If You Don't Know About Hyomei Try It at F. W. Jordan's Risk.

Nearly every reader of The Gazette has read about HYOMEI, but many of them continue to suffer from catarrh just because they do not exactly understand just what HYOMEI is.

To these sufferers F. W. Jordan says you don't have to know anything about HYOMEI except that you breathe it and that it does not contain cocaine or opium or any harmful drug.

You can find out all about HYOMEI without taking any chances whatever. Just get an outfit today, read the simple instructions, give it a fair trial and then if you are not willing to say that it is the best remedy for catarrh you have ever used F. W. Jordan will gladly return your money.

A complete HYOMEI outfit costs but $1.00. Extra bottles 50 cents.

WHEAT SMUT

Smut in wheat is probably the cause of more damage next to that of the Hessian Fly to this staple crop of the state. Like the damage of the Hessian Fly its ravages can be avoided by taking advantage of methods well-known to science. This is done by destroying the spores of smut on seed wheat according to the following procedure as outlined by H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist of the State Department of Agriculture, in his reply to a correspondent:

"Replying to your letter asking for a formula for treating seed wheat for smut, I beg to say that this is not a difficult operation, and will be effective if undertaken. It is not expensive, and it requires no great skill or knowledge to do it properly. It is really impossible to fail in this regard if directions are followed in this brief article.

"Smut, as you know, makes the black heads of wheat and oats, and is often responsible for the loss of a very large percentage of the crop, which sometimes amounts to fully one-half of the entire crop. Since this is so easily and cheaply prevented, there is no excuse for a farmer losing his wheat or oats from this trouble.

"The treatment consists in soaking the seed with a solution of the liquid known as formalin or formaldehyde. It can be purchased from druggists by the pound in liquid form. In commercial form it consists for 40 per cent of formaldehyde in an aqueous or watery solution. It is a strong germicide and preservative. One pint of this solution in thirty gallons of water is enough to destroy the smut germs, and also the Scab germs of potatoes and others kinds of germs, when it comes in contact with them.

"There are two methods of treatment: One consists in putting the grain into sacks, and setting these into a barrel containing 30 gallons of water, with the pint of formalin in solution in it. It should be lifted up and down occasionally, to be sure that the liquid will penetrate and come in contact with all the grain. A few minutes soaking is long enough at a time. The grain should then be emptied on the barn floor on a clean spot, and spread thin, and allowed to dry, being shoveled over occasionally.

"It can be treated at any time before sowing, if it is kept clean after treatment, but the best plan is to treat it just before the time for sowing, and if it does not get dry rapidly enough the drying can be hastened by dusting a little slaked lime over it. The best plan, however, is to dry it by opening the barn doors, and letting the wind blow through, and using a shovel to stir it occasionally.

"Another method of the treatment is to spread the grain on the floor, and with a sprinkling can pour over it water containing a solution of formalin, prepared by the formula mentioned above. By shoveling the grain at the time of pouring on the liquid, it is possible to be sure that all is soaked. Let it stand a short time, then dry it, and use it when ready. Your grain is not poisoned by this treatment, but the germs are all killed. After it is dry, it would not injure poultry or livestock to eat it.

"It must be remembered that the smut germs get into the field in three ways: (1) They are liable to reach there from smut of the previous crop. (2) They are taken out by the straw which is smutty, because it has been used for bedding, or otherwise mixed with the manure, but not well decomposed. (3) They are taken to the field on the grains themselves, if not treated. Knowing this, one can see that to be sure to be rid of the smut, he should plant clean wheat on ground where smut did not occur the year before, and where no straw was spread from a smutty crop."

The Potato Stalk Borer

Numerous inquiries are addressed to Prof. H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist of the State Department of Agriculture, requesting information on how to destroy the Potato Stalk Borer or Weevil, the larvae of which feeds inside the stalk of this plant and destroys it. It appears this pest has been very destructive in many sections of the state, and since it is impossible to control it by spraying, it will be of interest to many to know that according to the following reply by the Professor the proper steps to take to destroy it is to gather and burn the vines:

"Instead of attempting to treat your ground to get rid of the potato stalk weevil or borer you should pull and burn the vines as soon as they are done growing, or at the very latest gather and burn them immediately after digging. It is important for all people in the district to act in accordance and burn the vines while the weevils are yet in them."

FOUR IN OLD PERU.

The Mystic Number About Which Centered All Their Beliefs.

The Peruvians cared nothing for any of the supposed mystic properties of either three, five or seven. To them the four was sacred, and around it they intertwined the main features of all their religious ceremonies and queer beliefs. They believed the earth to be a square divided into four parts and suspended from the heavens by four cords, one at each of the four corners. All of their cities were quartered by four principal streets running from a square in the center. They held four annual feasts in honor of the moon, the "silver sister of the sun."

To them eternity was to be divided into four periods of time, each composed of four times 4,000 years, and at the end of each of these cycles the sun was to be blotted out of existence. They prayed to the four winds, or to "ye gods that dwell at the four corners of the earth." To them the rains came from four enormous heavenly turtles that vomited dampness, and the four winds from the lungs of the four gigantic caryatids which stand at the four cardinal points of paradise. The above are but a small portion of the fables alluded to in the legends of the Incas.

EASY TO GET RID OF DANDRUFF

Dandruff means that down near the roots of your hair there is a vast army of little invisible germs or microbes.

And this army never sleeps; it wages a war of destruction night and day. It destroys the nourishment that the hair must have in order to grow vigorously and abundantly.

PARISIAN SAGE now sold all over America will destroy these germs and at the same time furnish the hair roots with just the proper nourishment to make hair grow lustrous and luxuriant.

PARISIAN SAGE is guaranteed by F. W. Jordan to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp or money back. It is a delightful hair dressing that wins instant favor with refined women. Sold for only 50 cents a large bottle by F. W. Jordan and druggists everywhere. Girl with Auburn hair on every carton and bottle.

Soluble Glass.

In 1818 a German professor stumbled upon the discovery of soluble glass, which he made from silica with soda and potash combined. This is now extensively used for rendering wood-work incombustible and marble and plaster secure against atmospheric agents, as a vehicle for mineral colors, in a kind of fresco painting to be exposed to the weather. In the manufacture of artificial stone and in the composition of fireproof cements for stores, etc.

About thirty years ago it was discovered that glass might be rendered exceedingly hard by dipping it in oil when at a certain degree of temperature. The particles, however, seem to be put in a state of high tension, and the whole may suddenly fly into a thousand pieces.

The Romany Hye.

The first notice of gypsies which occurs in European literature is from the pen of an Austrian monk about 1122. They are described by him in very uncomplimentary terms as "fish-maellies and brashies, who go peddling through the wide world, having neither house nor home, cheating the people with their tricks and deceiving mankind, but not openly." Having got a bad name, they seem to have been in the middle ages treated everywhere with systematic harshness. In England the most barbarous decrees against them were issued, even as late as the days of Henry VIII. and Elizabeth.—London Globe

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and freshest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

HE WOULDN'T BE A HERO

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

Joe Harper was a sturdy young farmer, and Ellen Taylor was the daughter of another, and they were engaged to be married. All their friends said it would be a sensible match. Joe was given the credit of lots of "horse sense," and no one could say that the young woman was a bit frivolous. That is, they couldn't until after a certain girl friend of hers from town had made her a three weeks' visit and left four or five novels behind her when she departed.

Those novels were about heroes, cavaliers, chevaliers and knights. They told of perils, combats and rescues. Mrs. Taylor would have chuckled them into the stove had she found them and boxed her daughter's ears besides, but she didn't find them. They were read at night after the rest of the family was asleep. By the time she had finished the second one the girl was looking askance at Joe. He was sunburned and freckled; his ears were rather large; instead of saying prithree, he said by gosh. In all the novels the chevaliers had plumes in their hats; Joe didn't even wear a hen's feather in his old straw. He had a hoe on his shoulder instead of a lance, and he plowed corn with an old sea-bitten mare instead of riding around on an Arabian steed.

No, Joe didn't size up for shucks, compared to the chevaliers.

In the meadow, near the field where Joe was plowing corn, a colony of bumble bees had taken up their quarters in a tuft of grass. This fact was known to the Taylor family, and the farmer intended to rout them out some evening. Bumble bees are not chevaliers, but they are the next thing to it. At 2 o'clock one afternoon, when it was seen that Joe and the old mare were hard at work, Miss Ellen put on her bonnet and walked out to that bumblebee caucus. At five feet from it she halted and screamed and danced around.

The scream reached Joe Harper's ears, and he let go of the plow handles and made for the fence. In an instant he realized the situation, but he didn't dash forward and fall over several stumps. Instead of so doing he sat on the fence and called out:

"Ellen, why in thunder don't you run away?"

"Oh, the bumble bees!" she shouted. "Yes, but don't stand there like an idiot! Make for the house!"

A week had passed and the stings had been cured, when Joe got another chance. At 2 o'clock one afternoon Miss Ellen sat on the veranda sewing and wondering how Joe would look in armor and on horseback, when she caught sight of a big dog coming along the highway on the gallop. She screamed for Joe again. He dropped his hoe and came running, but paused as he reached the fence to ask what was the matter.

"Mad dog! Mad dog!" she shouted. "Then climb up that ladder on to the roof of the kitchen!"

No rushing to the rescue, no beating the dog's brains out, no remarks worth leaving to posterity. Miss Ellen was furious with him. That was the reason a rung of the ladder broke as she was descending and precipitated her on an ashheap. Within an hour the cavalier of the hoe received word that he need never show up at the Taylor house again. The engagement was off.

"Now look at that!" he exclaimed when he had been made to understand. "There was that ladder handy to climb. I saw the dog coming and knew it belonged to Perkins. Was there any need for me to break my other suspender? And if it had been a real mad dog would it have helped the case, for both of us to have been bitten?"

Joe stayed away. He had been told to and he obeyed. At the end of two weeks he took a day off to go fishing. Miss Ellen heard through her brother that he was going, and she made a little plan. She had got over being mad at the man who wouldn't be heroic. In fact, she wanted to "make up." She would go a-fishing too. She wouldn't fish for fish, but for Joe Harper. The lover of other and happier days was fishing from a shady bank when she came into view, but he was on the other side of the stream. He watched her walk out on a stranded log and said to himself:

"If she gets a bite and jerks up her pole she'll sure go off that log."

Two minutes later the thing happened. There was a bubble, a jerk and a souse, and after the souse a yell for Joe. He had been seen. The water was only about three feet deep, and as the girl gained her feet after the souse she was called to:

"Don't get skeart, Ellen!"

"Oh, Joe—Joe!"

"You can wade ashore easy enough."

"Joe, I shall—shall!"

"No, you won't."

In the six weeks following the bet's were ten to one that Joe and Ellen would never marry, but those who gave the odds lamented it. The two met on the highway, and after pretending not to see each other they halted, and the girl said:

"Joe, I wanted to marry a hero."

"Well, I hain't one."

"I wanted to marry a hero, but I guess I'll have to take up with a great, big, good natured, slabsided farmer."

"Looks that way to me, Ellen," smiled Joe, and that evening the marriage day was set.

THE COUNTY FAIR

The success of an institution, such as a county fair, depends not alone upon the management but in considerable measure upon the citizens of the different sections of the county.

The management must, of course, guide and direct the whole exhibition; must furnish grounds and buildings that are adapted and suitable for the exhibitions, the races and the attractions and must make an effort to secure attractions and amusements of a high class. All this has been done by the present Management of the Society for next week's exhibition, we feel assured. It is now evident that the part of the program which depends primarily upon the Management will surpass former years. It is evident, too, that the entrances of stock will be large in all classes.

One thing depends particularly upon the farmers of the county and that is the display of products of the soil. If you have vegetables or fruits that are worthy to be placed upon exhibition, bring them to the fair and thus do your part toward making this fair a record-breaker. The fair is an institution of the county of which you are a citizen; do your part toward making it a success.

In addition to having a few days of needed recreation and rest from work every farmer of the county may take home with him information which will repay him for attending all of the days of the exhibition. The exchange of ideas with those engaged in the same pursuits is of great value, and often saves much experimenting and the consequent loss of time and money.

The County of Bedford is progressing along agricultural lines and in the growing of fruits, and such gatherings should do much to increase the progress. Do your part.

Poor Cuba

The burden of taxation bears more heavily on the individual in Cuba than anywhere else in the world. Eighty-five per cent. of the administration's total income is obtained by way of duties on goods imported. According to the latest official report of the Cuban treasurer the total collections during twelve months was $24,794,966.07. This means that (dividing that amount by 2,048,980, Cuba's population at the time, according to the census of 1907-1908) every man, woman and child in the country contributed $12.10 towards the Cuban government's support under the one single heading of customs receipts. This is the world's record, for comparing it with those of high-protection countries elsewhere it shows up as follows: Germany $1.22; Italy, $1.72; France, $2.22; United States, $3.55, and Cuba, $12.10.

A Pleasant Evening

Last Monday evening the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. John's Reformed Church, in connection with the regular monthly meeting, held an indoor picnic in the Sunday School room. Each lady brought a box or a basket of lunch and, after the business of the evening had been transacted and some time had been devoted to social enjoyment, a long table, which had been provided for the occasion was heaped with good things to eat. What happened after that any one's imagination can tell. There was present, however, one person who did not even imagine one thing which did happen. That was the pastor's wife. The meeting happened to fall upon the night just before her birthday and after the lunch, the president of the society, Mrs. Sell, in the name of that body, presented her with two beautiful rugs, as a birthday surprise. The surprise part was so complete that it added much to the joy of the giving and of the receiving. Many wished that such occasions as Monday evening might come often.

Back From the West

Charles A. Wertz of South Bedford Township returned Thursday evening of last week from a western trip covering five weeks, during which he saw snow in the Rockies and rode through the canyons; visited Denver, Cheyenne, Omaha, Chicago, Fort Wayne and many other places. He was much pleased with the country and the trip but at the end of it all he was glad to return in time to assist in the picking of a fine crop of apples from his Cumberland Valley orchards.

While visiting the Fair, bring all the family and have a photo made at the McCreary Studio, and receive an enlargement free.

Placing the Responsibility

Chester Albury Fletcher straddled his coaster and patiently waited for the old lady who was descending the steep hill to reach the bottom.

Chester did not like old ladies—at least when they were on the Gardner street hill.

Gardner street had gutter covers at the street corners and one could coast the whole three blocks of the hill, and run along on the level sidewalk for perhaps another block. The Red Racer could go further than any other coaster when the axles were greased—which was whenever Chester could find a wagon and no driver watching.

Mrs. Halsey finally reached the bottom of the hill and turned into Sutton street, so with a whoop Chester drew up his feet and the Red Racer was off. The coaster gained speed with every revolution of the wheels and at the end of the second block was tearing along finely. Chester had lately encountered a coal wagon (freshly greased and the axles of his own wagon were now well supplied.

He yelled a warning as he neared the corner of Sutton street. Ben Travis was crossing the street in a strangely absent minded manner. He did not seem to hear the shouts nor the rattle of the wheels, and Chester, being but eight and yet to experience his own first touch of the master passion, could not know that Elsie Bayard, coming along Sutton street in the opposite direction, was responsible for Ben's abstraction.

It is rather embarrassing to come face to face with a girl who only the night before has passionately declared that she never wants to see you again. Travis was wondering whether to bow or to act as though he had never seen Elsie before. In the face of such an absorbing problem it was not strange that he should not hear the coaster.

Elsie herself was equally engaged in trying to decide whether she would bow coldly if Ben did bow and so it happened that, unconscious of the rattle of the wheels, she stepped almost directly in the path of the speeding coaster.

With a quick twist of the wheels Chester essayed to pass between the two. He could have made it had not Ben sprung forward to push Elsie out of the way and had come himself directly in the path of the machine.

"There was a crash, a cry and Chester rolled over into the gutter while Ben lay still and white at Elsie's feet.

Unmindful of her dainty dress, Elsie threw herself upon her knees beside the unconscious man. A little crowd soon gathered and proffered aid. One brought a glass of water and with this Elsie restored Ben to consciousness and assisted him into the drug store on the corner. He had been badly shaken up, but Elsie's ministrations were more potent than the stimulant that the druggist proffered, and presently he rose weakly to his feet and announced his ability to get home unassisted.

"I am going with you," declared Elsie. "You are not fit to go by yourself."

"Do not trouble," urged Ben, though his eyes twinkled. "You have done far more than I have a right to expect from a stranger."

"Don't!" cried Elsie with a little shudder. "I was thinking of that when you lay there so still and white. Had you died I never could have forgiven myself."

"Then you mean—" questioned Ben.

"I mean that I am sorry for last night," she confessed. "But if it had not been for the accident I should not have realized it."

"Funny I didn't hear the cart coming. I saw you and I was wondering whether you would recognize me."

"I was wondering if you would bow," admitted Elsie. "Then the first thing that I knew the cart was coming toward me and you sprang to save me and got hurt yourself. That Fletcher boy ought to be given a good spanking."

"To the contrary," demurred Ben. "I think that we owe him a great deal. I wonder what became of him?"

"There's the cart," suggested Elsie, pointing to a battered wheel and a splintered plank by the roadway.

Behind the tree they discovered Chester, bravely blinking back the tears as he regarded the remnants of his once cherished possession.

"What did you jump that way for?" he demanded of Ben, as he looked up to encounter Travis' gaze. "I could have steered between you easy as not."

"But we didn't want anything to come between us," explained Travis with the twinkle in his eye.

"He was trying to save me from being run down," added Elsie proudly.

"I could have made it easy," declared Chester, his pride as a steersman aroused. "It was because he jumped when he shouldn't that I hit him."

"If you put it in that light," suggested Travis with a laugh, "suppose that you take the wreck over to the wagon shop and tell them to make it good and send the bill to me."

Chester regarded Travis gratefully. "You're all right," he declared. "Most people act like I run 'em down on purpose."

"This," explained Travis, "was an act of the gods. You are relieved of responsibility," and he limped off with Elsie's help, leaving Chester still amazed.

Mt. Lake Park, Md., September 10.—The International Bible Students' Association has been holding a Convention here for more than a week; many able speakers have been heard. Higher Criticism is at a discount amongst these Bible Students. They claim that the internal harmonies of the Bible attest its Divine authenticity. Amongst these earnest students are many who at one time were infidels. They profess greater faith than ever in the Bible as the result of reading Pastor Russell's books, to which many of them were led through his sermons.

Pastor Russell was the principal speaker at the Convention today. He arrived during the week, and is being entertained some distance from the Park, at the Weber mansion. Hundreds visit him every evening. Pastor Russell spoke twice today in the large Auditorium. He delivered one of his discourses from the text, "In the last days the Mountain of the Lord's House shall be established in the top of the mountains, * * * and all people shall flow unto it" (Isaiah ii, 2). He said in part:

Our text tells of great events in the "last days." It would be a mistake, however, to suppose that these words imply the end of time or the end of the world, in the ordinary sense. The Bible declares that "the earth abideth forever," and it tells of the wonderful blessings of Restitution, when the Lord's footstool shall blossom as the rose—Paradise restored. All this is to come in the "last days."

The Jews understood that the seven days of the week, six of labor and the seventh of rest, were typical of seven greater days of a thousand years each. In harmony with this, though, some of them tell us that we are living in the Friday night of the world's history—which means that the great Sabbath of Rest is about to begin—the thousand years of Messiah's reign (the Jewish day beginning in the evening).

The New Testament writers seem to have had the same thought. Thus our Lord declared, "My Word shall judge you in the Last Day." Similarly, Martha declared her faith in the resurrection of her brother, saying, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection, at the Last Day"—the Millennial Day, the Day of Christ—the great Day which will witness the overthrow of sin and death and the uplifting of humanity. Of that great Day we read, "In His Day shall the righteous flourish, and evil-doers shall be cut off." The Seventh Day is frequently spoken of as a "that Day," as indicating the time when Divine power will no longer permit the reign of sin amongst men, but Messiah's Kingdom will actively intervene. The overthrow of Satan, sin and all unrighteousness will then take place. It is during this Day that Messiah will put down all things opposed to righteousness: "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."

Throughout that glorious Day the resurrection process will be in operation; mankind will be rising out of its meanness, sin, sickness and death, back to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed by way of the Cross. In the end of these days, or "after these days," of the reign of sin, God promises to make a New Covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah, through which they shall be uplifted; and the blessing will flow from them to all nations (Jeremiah xxxi, 31). It will be after these days also that "God will pour out His Spirit upon all flesh," as says the Prophet Joel (Joel ii, 28).

Our text is to be considered from this standpoint. In the end of these days, in the promised Day of Messiah, the Mountain of the Lord's House shall be established, fixed, in the very top of the mountains—above all other kingdoms. This is in full accord with the entire tenor of the Scriptures. A mountain symbolizes a kingdom; and as the Prophet declares, God's Kingdom will be the highest Mountain; it will be over the top of all other kingdoms. It will be established or fixed permanently above all others.

Messiah, the great King, with His Elect Bride and associate with Him, will exercise His Divine power, Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, and sin will no longer be permitted. From the invisible plane of glory and majesty, Justice will be executed in the earth; every good word, thought and deed will be rewarded, and every evil thought, word and deed will be punished—swiftly—surely. Perhaps paralysis of the tongue will be the means by which evil speaking, false words and deceptions will be punished. Perhaps paralysis of the arm or finger will be the means employed to stop the crime. Certain it is that "Nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God's Holy Kingdom" thus established.

How speedily the world will then learn righteousness! Now it doubts the very existence of God, and declares that if He exists He pays little or no heed to wrong-doers. "Now the wicked flourish; yea, they that tempt God are even exalted," as the Scriptures declare. But the New Day will change all this. Messiah "will lay righteousness to the line and justice to the plummet, and the hail [Truth] shall sweep away the refuge of lies, misrepresentations, misunderstandings" (Isaiah xxviii, 17, 18). "The blind shall see out of obscurity, and the deaf ears shall be unstopped;" "The knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth," until "None shall need say to his neighbor, 'Know the Lord,' for all shall know Him."

Gravitation Reversed
The present tendency is to gravitate downward, but our text tells of a reversal of this order. All nations shall then flow or gravitate upward—toward the righteous Kingdom of Messiah: "Many people shall say, 'Let us go up.'" The Kingdom, in its original establishment, will be Israelitish—Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets will be made Princes in all the earth (Psalm xiv, 16).

The Jews, naturally, will rally to their standard and begin to recognize the fulfillment of the prophecies of old. Other nationalities will begin slowly to realize the import of the great, New Jewish Dispensation. Their ideas and ideals will be antagonistic for a time. Gradually they will see the Restitution blessings coming to Israel, in harmony with the Divine arrangements of the Kingdom. Then, as our context declares, "Many people will say, 'Come, let us go up to the Mountain of the Lord, to the House of the God of Jacob; He will teach us [as well as the Jews] His ways and we [as well as they] will learn to walk in His paths.'"

Both Spiritual and Natural Israel are in the picture. Mt. Zion is the higher, the Spiritual Jerusalem; the lower, the earthly. The Law shall go forth from Mt. Zion [Spiritual Zion, the Messiah—Head and Body—Bridegroom and Bride]—while the Word of the Lord [the directing and instructing] will go forth from Jerusalem [the Patriarchal Princes, who will represent the Kingdom].

Judging Among the Gentiles
The context tells us that the new King, Messiah, will judge amongst the nations—amongst all the peoples. It will be a general judgment first, an individual one subsequently. The national judgments will mean calamities upon the nations. The demonstrations of the great dreadnaughts and great armies will prove that they are not to be the peacemakers of earth. On the contrary, those trusting in these devices will suffer most severely. All must learn the lesson that Messiah's Kingdom comes not by human might nor power, but is the Lord's institution, in His own appointed time.

The lesson will be so thoroughly learned in that Day of Trouble that war will forever cease. The Prophet David tells us that the mighty army of the Lord, through Messiah's King-

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

Come to Hundreds of Bedford People.

There are days of dizziness; Spells of headache, sideache, backache; Sometimes rheumatic pains; Often urinary disorders. All tell you plainly the kidneys are sick.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.

Can Bedford residents doubt this statement? Mrs. C. Weyant, Clarence Street, Hyndman, Pa., says: "I was in poor health for some time and I now think it was due to inactive kidneys. Chills and dizzy spells annoyed me and I suffered a great deal from pains in my back. My husband finally procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I commenced their use. The first few doses brought great relief and it was only a short time before I was in the best of health." (Statement given October 12, 1907.)

A Lasting Effect

dom, will work havoc with present institutions. Then "He will make wars to cease unto the ends of the earth." Our context tells us that thereafter "They shall beat their swords into plow shares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Even Boys' Brigades, etc., thereafter will be at a discount. Human energy and activity will find better employment in conquering self, sin-sickness and death.

Hiding in the Rocks
The description here given by the Prophet Isaiah of the Day with which this Gospel Age will end, the great Day when Messiah's Kingdom begins, agrees very closely with a description of the same given in the book of Revelation. Isaiah tells us that idolatry to gold and silver shall be brought to an end, and the great trouble of that Day will cause many to hide themselves in the rocks, for fear of the Lord and for the glory of His Majesty (Isaiah ii, 10, 11). "The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and their haughtiness shall be bowed down and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that Day" (vs. 9-11).

The idols He shall utterly abolish, and those who worship them "shall go into the rocks and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord and for the glory of His Majesty, when He ariseth to shake terribly the earth" (vs. 18-21).

The same picture is set before us in Revelation vi, 15-17. Here the great ones of earth are represented as calling upon the mountains to fall on them and to hide them from the presence of the Lord. The thought is to fall over us, hide us, protect us. The Prophet Malachi asks, "Who shall abide in the great Day of the Lord?" "Who shall be able to stand?"

Let us construct a picture before our minds. Let us suppose the vast oceans, constituting three-fourths of the earth's surface, to represent the masses of mankind unsettled, untached, without property, with little hope or prospect, with illimitable longings, but no power to satisfy them—"without God and without hope in the world." Let us consider the land behind and before us to represent society, fixed, established, desirous of peace, having something which it does not wish to lose, which it does not wish the "sea" class to wash away.

As in the sea we find shallows and mighty depths, so on the land we find low places, higher places and mountain peaks, and each of these represents a certain degree of prosperity or adversity. The mountain heights would represent the princes of society, merchant princes, bankers, as well as political powers. As from time immemorial there has been a conflict between the land and the sea, the latter, in storms, violently attacking the former and seeking to capture it, so between the two classes here represented—the "sea" class, helpless and without property, is envious of the "earth" class, those who, under the present order, seize and possess the chief blessings.

The mountains, the rocks of society [social institutions, lodges, financial institutions, capitalists, combinations, national treaties, etc.], will all fail in that great Day of trial and judging and testing; the shaking and overthrow of every human institution is in full accord with the Divine requirements of Justice, Righteousness.

Who Shall Then Stand?

My dear hearers, where is your treasure? Where is your security? This long-foretold Day of the Lord is nigh. The great time of Trouble impends, a time "such as was not since there was a nation" (Daniel xii, 1). If our treasures are upon the earth and our confidence rests in human organizations, the time is near when we may be crawling into these holes, these social and financial protective arrangements, calling upon them to cover us, protect us, but there will be no protection possible. The Apostle declares respecting that Day that everything that can be shaken will be shaken—everything that is not in full alignment with the Divine standards will go down. In the language of the Scripture, we should set our affections on things above, not on earthly things. The Master counsels further, "Lay up for yourselves treasure in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal."

If we have been careless in this matter in the past, it is high time for us to invest what little we have of time, influence, talent and money in the service of the King of kings—in laying up treasure in heaven, in promoting the interests of the great Kingdom wherein we trust, and of which we hope soon to be members, sharers with our dear Redeemer.

We are not counseling foolishness—the throwing away of money, of time and influence. On the contrary, we counsel the spirit of a sound mind, that every hom, every talent, every penny be used, not as our own, but as the Lord's; not according to our selfish desires, but according to the Divine will, so far as we are able to understand it; that we may glorify God in our bodies and spirits which are His.

Every talent we possess is that much of our stewardship, of which we must shortly give account. The Lord's servants, the consecrated, Spirit-Begotten, will be called to account before that great Day of trouble upon the world. Jesus said, "Watch ye, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all those things coming upon the earth, and to stand before the Son of Man." Our watching is in respect to our talents, our faithfulness in their use.

In one of His parables the Lord tells us that on His return to establish His Kingdom, before beginning to deal with the world at all, He will deal with His servants. The inquiry will be, How have we used the pounds and talents given to us by our Master? All those who use their opportunities faithfully will be accounted worthy of a share in the Kingdom, as illustrated in the parable, "Enter ye into the joys of your Lord," "You have been faithful over a few things, I will make you ruler over many things;" "Have dominion over two cities," "five cities," etc.

There will, indeed, be some of God's people who will pass through the trouble with the world. Those who are too fearful of the weight of the cross will bury their talent in the earth. They will fail to have their portion with the Lord and His saintly few in the Kingdom and, instead, will have their portion with the hypocrites, in the great trouble of that Day.

The Catastrophe Cannot Be Averted

It is impossible for us, or for any one, to avert the great catastrophe which is surely bearing down upon the world. The Lord's people are to have nothing whatever to do with bringing about the great catastrophe, any more than had the Prophets, whose words we are using. It is for us to make our own "calling and election sure," and as far as possible to send out the Divine Message in no uncertain tones to all of God's people, that each and all may be found faithful in the use of their pounds and talents—retrieving each possible loss of opportunities, or, as the Apostle says, "Redeeming the time, because the days are evil" and unfavorable.

Our day witnesses the world gone pleasure-mad—"Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." The spirit of the world surrounds us, threatens to engulf us and destroy our spirituality. There never was a greater need than now for the soldiers of the cross to arise and "put on the whole armor of God," to "watch and pray," and fight a good fight against their own weaknesses and against the darts and snares of the Adversary.

Many dear Christians realize that we are living in strange times, but do not realize that we are in the transition period between the reign of sin, sickness and death, and the reign of Messiah's Kingdom of righteousness and light. Let each one whose eyes of understanding have opened to a better appreciation of God's great Book be on the alert to "show forth the praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light."

WOULDN'T CHARGE FOR AID

But Good Samaritan Farmer Would Sell His Team to the Stalled Automobilist.

"Hi, there, mister," said Witherbee, to a passing farmer, as his car stuck in the mud. "What'll you charge me for the use of your team to pull this car out of the mud?"

"Why," returned the farmer, scratching his head in a puzzled sort of fashion, "I'm not the kind of a feller as would charge a sufferin' feller bein' anything at all for helpin' him out o' trouble."

"That's mighty nice of you," said Witherbee.

"No, sir," said the farmer. "My conscience wouldn't never rest if I done a thing like that. Jest couldn't look my wife or the parson in the face if I took pay for bein' a good Samaritan."

"By George!" said Witherbee, "it does my heart good to hear a man talk that way these days."

"Waal, it's been a rule o' mine ever since I was a boy," said the old man.

"I wish there were more people like you," said Witherbee.

"Pity there ain't," said the farmer. "but I don't take any pride to myself becuz of it. Giddap!"

"But I say," said Witherbee, "where are you going? You haven't helped me out of the mud yet?"

"Why," said the old man, "you hain't made me any offer."

"What for?" demanded Witherbee.

"For the team," said the farmer. "I can't charge ye nothin' for helpin' ye, but I'll sell ye the hosses for $50 a head."—Harper's Bazar.

do not of necessity mean clothing of the same sort. The artist who perhaps never sees the clothes he illustrates has nothing to stay his hand or prevent his imagination from having full play in the matter of looks.

We believe that garments correctly cut and thoroughly well made are surely attractive if they fit the wearer, and, owing to the variety of models we have in stock, we surely have your particular size and as our stock is now complete in our store, we would ask you to come in and let us demonstrate whether you are a picture with the suit or coat we are trying to sell you. Sale of Church Property

Friday afternoon, September 8, the Reformed Church property at Pleasantville was sold to Hensch Black of that town for $611 by Levi Roundbush, who was instructed at the last meeting of Juniata Classis to do this work.

The congregation, which worshipped here, was established in 1868 and for some years entertained hopes of securing a strong congregation. In later years a number of people, moving from the town and immediate community, weakened the congregation and with only a few members left, it was deemed wise to discontinue the organization.

A petition from those few members was sent to Juniata Classis, asking that the organization be discontinued. This request was granted. A committee to do this was appointed consisting of the pastor, Rev. J. W. Zehring, Rev. A. F. Nace, a former pastor, and Elder Levi Roundbush.

The last service was held July 13, 1911, at which time Rev. Nace delivered an address and the pastor, Rev. Zehring, in a few well chosen and regretful remarks, declared the organization abandoned.

The abandoning of this congregation brought many words of regret from the citizens of the town and it was with the saddest hearts that the few members parted with the organization which they had learned to love so well, and the pastor with much regret and reluctance leaves these people.
